The following are articles and reports on the web that the Community and Economic Development

Program at the UNC School of Government shared through social media over the past month. Follow us on twitter or facebook to receive regular updates.

Items of interest related to CED in North Carolina:

The City of High Point reduces minimum housing backlog from hundreds of cases to “zero backlog” (and commercial enforcement too). <http://bit.ly/2F6enAG> Read also the Center for Community Progress and SOG faculty members’ report from 2016 when the Council priority was set. <http://bit.ly/2F78eUR>

DFI is working with Durham County to bring affordable housing, market-rate housing, parking, and commercial space to County-owned parking lots downtown. <http://bit.ly/2QIHozL>

The Carolina Journal looks at economic development megasites in North Carolina and the role of infrastructure and site certification. <http://bit.ly/2z2IAML>

Some smaller NC municipalities consider merging services with larger ones. Faculty colleague Jeff Hughes at the EFC discusses water systems. <http://bit.ly/2OTH1EO>

Our faculty member Jonathan Morgan weighs in on changes for economic development organizations in Charlotte. <https://t.co/FMVpuDpKBD>

Other CED items:

Read the Federal Reserve article on Chetty’s research on economic mobility and why the neighborhood in which a child is raised really matters. <http://bit.ly/2quKJLd>

The Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta reviews the literature on the impact of economic development incentives. <http://bit.ly/2S5dmdX>

The Wall Street Journal discusses public museums as revitalization catalysts. <https://on.wsj.com/2zrkBFX>
